Preface

The second edition of Huxford's Fine Art Value Guide has been compiled from auction sales covering a two-year span (1988 through 1989) as reported by twenty-six of the major auction galleries in the United States, Canada, England, and Monaco. It is unique in that the wide, meaningless ranges usually found in art-evaluating guides that are so confusing to the novice have been avoided altogether. Instead, individual items are listed (either by title or description), actual measurements are given, and any and all pertinent information that would affect the assessment of their values is provided for the reader, thereby allowing him much more insight and understanding regarding the realized prices. Abbreviations have been kept to a minimum in order to facilitate comprehension. Every effort has been made to give the most thorough and accurate artist information possible.

Sales are sorted alphabetically by title of work or description rather than by value. (You'll find that often the same item has been sold several times through more than one auction gallery and so will be listed consecutively.) By noting the dates of the sale, a sort of this type makes it obvious which artist's works are appreciating and which are declining in value. Each listing contains the date of the auction through which each item sold, along with a code that identifies the auction house.

Please bear in mind that all values given are auction results; you may find gallery prices much higher due to many factors. For instance, the work of a western artist may bring more in his home territory than it would through an eastern auction house. The gallery owner may have bought an item that was attributed to a particular artist and only after spending much time and effort was then able to assign a positive artist identification. Naturally overhead and operating expenses must also be taken into account.

Buying Art: Some Questions and Answers

Why do we buy art? For some it is for no other reason than to have something to hang on the living-room wall. For others it is an investment or a way to beat inflation. With the first group, specialized knowledge is of little consequence: as long as you like, buy it. With the second group, reliance on an art-investment guru (often a dealer/broker) is the rule, and again specialized knowledge (other than what guru to use) is of little importance. It is obvious that the above two groups represent extremes. For the majority of fine art buyers, appeal (esthetics) and cost are the factors determining an art purchase. Esthetics are personal and impossible to codify and tabulate in a guide book format. Cost, on the other hand, is the proper domain of a price guide.

Where to buy it? At a dealer's? At auction? Good dealers have wide experience in the art market, are familiar with research methodologies, understand conservation techniques, and stand behind what they sell. Here are some additional characteristics we like to find in a dealer: unpressured selling, pleasant demeanor, and a willingness to help and to answer questions honestly.

The other route to take is that of the auction house. When buying paintings at auction, be aware of the kind of guarantee that is offered. Ask about the provenance and condition of a work. Many auction houses provide this kind of information on the premise that the best customer is an informed customer. In some instances, the buyer must provide the requisite expertise. Here the situation is one of caveat emptor. Keep in mind that though authenticity may be guaranteed, condition rarely is.

How to decide which artist to collect? Both esthetics and cost figure here. Buy the work of an artist that pleases you. The more famous an artist is, the more likely his works are to be esthetically successful (which is precisely why he is famous) and hence more costly. For example: you decide that you like a painting and you think it is right for you. Do some research on the artist. Who's Who in American Art, Mantle Fielding, and Groce and Wallace (19th-century artists) are standard reference books on American artists. The ten-volume Benezit serves for all artists, Europeans and otherwise. These books are available in most libraries and bookstores. In looking at artists biographies, check to see with whom they studied, the prizes they won, and where they exhibited. Have an idea of what kind of work from what period the artist is famous for. Looking at prices may help here. If landscapes by an artist bring consistently higher prices than his portraits, it is obvious that his landscapes are better buys. If the artist whose work you want to purchase is not listed anywhere and does not have an auction record, you might want to think twice before getting involved and buying the painting. Should you buy the painting, realize that it is being bought solely on the basis of its esthetic appeal. (One of the most beautiful watercolors we've ever owned was by an unlisted artist with no price record. It was as if the artist had somehow fallen out of the late 19th century sky to paint this one miraculous work and then disappear. To this date we've never seen another work by this artist. We must report that the watercolor was subsequently sold, and at a profit.)

What other factors determine cost? Bright paintings please. Luminous landscapes and seascapes, ships, genre scenes, beautiful women, children, beach scenes, trompe-l'oeil, still lifes, and garden scenes are all high on the list of desirability. Modern works are sought, based on how successfully they achieve the style (for example, abstract expressionism, cubism, minimalism, constructivism, photorealism, etc.) in which they are painted. Oils are generally worth more than watercolors or pastels by the same artist. However, if an artist is famous for works in pastel, then the price of a pastel by that artist can top the price of an oil.

Size is also a cost factor. Within limits, the bigger a painting is, the more it will be worth. A painting 40" x 50" is considered to be within the upper limits for ideal size. Yet a very large painting by a major artist can be very important, expensive, and destined for a museum. The same size painting by a minor artist presents problems in that no museum is likely to want it, and private homes do not have the wall space necessary to hang it. Of course, some artists specialized in small works, and such should not be overlooked on the basis of size.

The history of a painting can add to its value. Was it exhibited and where? Look for exhibition labels on the back of the painting. Has the painting been reproduced in a catalogue or a book? Is it included in a catalogue raisonne of the artist's works? There is another point to made here: even though they have no current auction records, artists whose biographies show them to have won many prizes and to have been exhibited widely tend to resurface. They were good and highly-esteemed artists in their days, and they may well develop a new following (with resulting auction records). There is some speculation involved here, but there is also a reasonable chance of a pay-off later on.

How important is condition when buying an oil painting? It is most desirable to buy a painting in untouched and pristine original condition. Unfortunately, this is not always feasible. Good restoration requires skill and is expensive. Rips, tears, holes, and areas of paint loss can be acceptable if the damage is minimal. It is also easier to clean a dirty canvas than to repaint one that has been overcleaned. Learn how to use a black (ultraviolet) light to detect areas that have been touched up (impainted) as well as fake signatures. When buying watercolors, pastels, or drawings, be careful about stains and tears. Restoration of works on paper is a very delicate task and can be very costly. Works on paper should be mounted using acid-free mats and boards, if they were not already so mounted at the time of purchase.

How reliable are the prices quoted in an auction price guide? Now let's go to the heart of the matter. Prices stated in a guide represent actual prices paid. It should be remembered, however, that a price guide cannot report on the esthetic value of a painting, its condition, or other factors affecting price (historical backgrounds, exhibition records, etc.) Extremely high or low prices may indicate unusual circumstances at the time of the sale and should be analyzed very carefully, since they may not be representative of the fair market value of a given artist's work. Allowing for the preceding caveats, an auction price guide is invaluable in deciding what to pay for a painting. Prices paid at auction represent a standard criterion by which the value of an artist's work can be assessed in the open market.

A final piece of advice to prospective buyers is to be well informed. Visit museums and galleries; find out what reference books are available at your local library. Purchase as many books on art as your budget will allow, but remember that books on Michelangelo may look very impressive on your coffee table but will not be of much help at your next auction unless you are very rich indeed.

Good luck and happy hunting in your collecting!

How to Use this Book

Artists' information lines are in bold. Nationality and birth/death dates are found in parenthesis immediately following the artist's name. If the artist is still living or if the death date is unavailable, the birth date will be given followed by a (-); if the artist is deceased but only the date of death is known, that date will be preceded by a (-). When exact data was not available, the century during which the artist lived/worked is noted. Occasionally the date will signify the years during which the artist flourished, but this is specifically indicated.

Each work of the artist is sorted alphabetically under his/her name, either by title or by the auction catalog's description. If the title does not readily suggest the subject, a descriptive phrase often follows. (Such a phrase when taken directly from the catalog will not be set off by parenthesis; the parenthetical descriptions reflect a layman's view of the work.) Titles in other languages are often translated; these are also in parenthesis.

The auction house from whose catalog the listing was taken will be indicated by a special code at the end of the line. These codes are explained in the section Auction Gallery Codes and Pricing Practices, which will also inform you as to which of the galleries do or do not charge a buyers premium and which includes this charge in their post-auction report. The actual sale date is noted immediately following the gallery code, and prices we have listed are just as they appear on any given company's post-auction price sheet.

Because auctions are notorious for extremely high and low hammer prices (which result from a multitude of factors and tend to cloud the issue of market values), whenever an item exceeded its pre-sale estimate by more than 20%, it will be so signified by the letters 'OE' (over estimate) at the end of the listing. Conversely, a hammer price of more than 20% under the pre-sale estimate will be indicated by 'UE' for under estimate. Though admittedly generally inexplicable, such erratic prices may actually be early indicators of oncoming market trends.

When very similar lots sold through the same catalog, the lot numbers are provided so that you may more quickly find the original catalog reference if you so desire.

Some specific explanation may be required in order that you may fully understand each category:

Bronzes, Sculptures, and Assemblages: In this section, each description is for a bronze unless noted otherwise. If two dates are indicated, the first refers to when the work was originally conceived or executed, the second to when the specific bronze in the description line was actually cast. Because of the limitations of our one-line format, in order to differentiate between a work that can be positively linked to a particular studio or foundry and one whose origin can only be attributed, we have placed the name of the studio (or foundry) immediately following the size to indicate attribution – otherwise the manufacturer's name will be given before the date and/or size. When one dimension is given, it is height unless noted otherwise; when both height and length are given, height is first. Bear in mind that size and age have little bearing on the value of a bronze; the artist and the quality of the bronze are the most important worth-accessing factors to consider.

Paintings, Drawings, and Mixed Media: Type of medium used (for instance, watercolor, charcoal, gouache, etc.) will be indicated following the title and/or descriptive phrase at the beginning of each line. Pictures are framed unless stated otherwise. See also Glossary of Terms.

Photographs: Unless a frame or a mat is mentioned, assume that photographs are not framed. Dates given within the line indicate (first) when the negative was produced and (second) when the print was made. A vintage print is one made at the same time the negative was produced (or shortly thereafter), either by the photographer or by someone whose work he approved of or requisitioned. Sizes are actual print measurements (excluding the mat). When a photo is not marked with a studio stamp, attribution will be indicated directly after size.

Prints: Prints are sorted by artist or lithographer. A publisher's mark, when it appears on the print, will be noted directly before the date and/or size. When the publisher is identified after the size, the print is unmarked but is known to be published by that specific company and/or individual. Prints are framed unless noted otherwise. Damage has been listed when that information was given in the auction catalog. (Bear in mind that foxing, tears, and other imperfections in the margins are not as significant as when they extend into the image.) Measurements are usually taken from the platemark as indicated by 'P'. When the dimensions are preceded by an 'S' the size of the sheet is given; 'L' is used when measurements have been taken from the borderline of the subject.

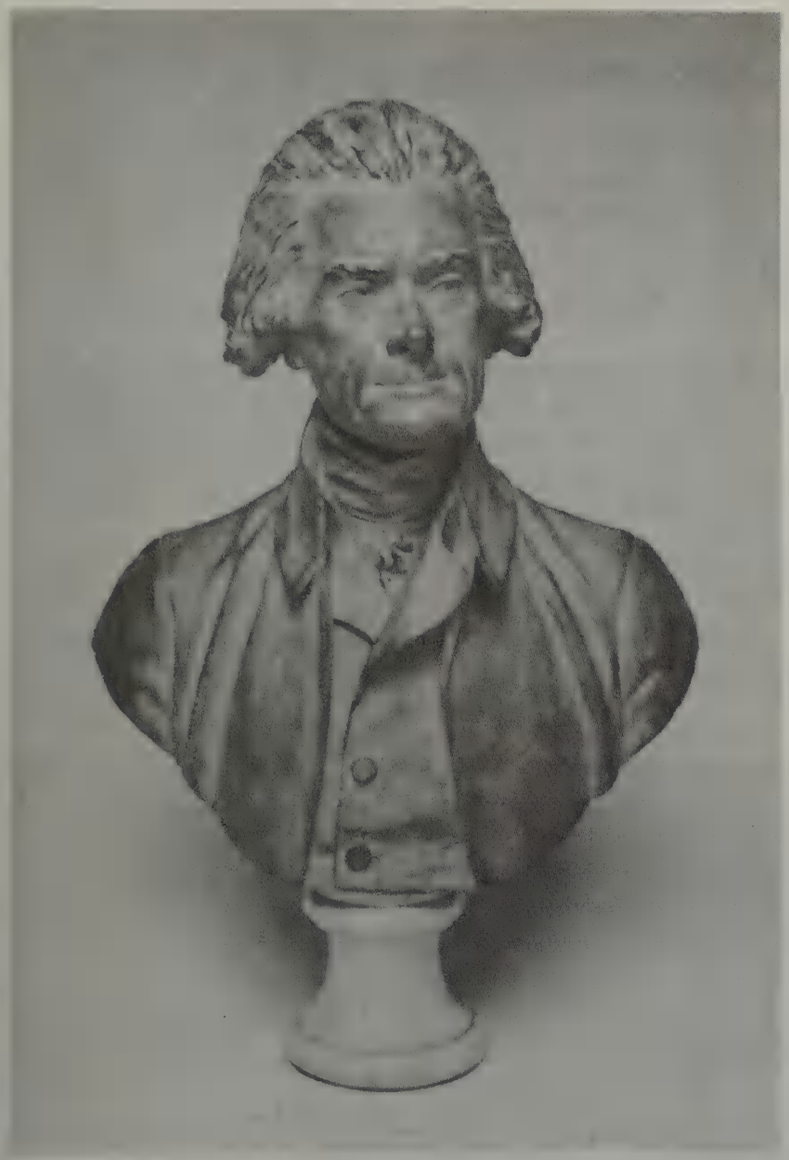
Butterfield & Butterfield, Auctioneers & Appraisers

Founded in 1865, Butterfield & Butterfield celebrates its125th anniversary in 1990. The company conducts auctions in its San Francisco and Los Angeles galleries and extends its scope through a network of regional representatives in London, Tokyo, Arizona, Texas, the Monterey Peninsula, Portland, Reno, Sacramento, San Diego, Santa Barbara, and Seattle.

Butterfield & Butterfield has been responsible for selling property from prominent estates and has been chosen by many notable museums who wish to deaccession property in order to raise funds for new acquisitions. Among these have been the Los Angeles County Museum of Art, San Francisco Museum of Modern Art, Santa Barbara Museum of Art, San Diego Museum of Art, Baltimore Museum of Art, and Phoenix Art Museum.

1989 brought a number of record-setting prices to both galleries: an ebonized cherrywood table set a national record for American Aesthetic furniture, a gold lacquer shodana broke the world record for a single piece of Japanese furniture, and a gentleman's Patek Philippe & Co. wristwatch set a West Coast record for fine timepieces.



The Los Angeles gallery generated excitement with a series of special sales, including the firm's first auction dedicated entirely to Art Deco, Art Nouveau, and Arts & Crafts furniture and decorative arts. A week of sales devoted exclusively to Western American history included an auction of property from the personal collection of Gene Autry and memorabilia from the Custer family. The sale of Thomas Custer's personal revolver set a record for English revolvers, and the sword presented to General Ulysses S. Grant when he took command of the Northern army broke all previous records for American swords.

Other special auctions at Butterfield & Butterfield included a sale of architectural renderings from the 1930s firm of Miller & Pflueger, one of the preeminent proponents of Art Deco and Modern styles. Property from the collection of Whitney Warren, Jr., was sold for the benefit of the Fine Arts Museums of San Francisco.

Butterfield & Butterfield has the largest staff of personal property appraisers on the West Coast. This staff of specialists provides written appraisals for insurance, inheritance tax, estate planning, and family division purposes. Verbal estimates of auction value may be obtained by bringing property to the regular free appraisal clinics in either San Francisco or Los Angeles. Those outside the area may send a photograph and brief description of up to five items for a free auction estimate by mail.

Catalogue subscriptions include post-sale results and a complimentary subscription to the Butterfield & Butterfield monthly bulletin. For a descriptive brochure, write to:

Schrager Auction Galleries, Ltd.

In 1985, Al Schrager bought the sixty three-year old Third Church of Christian Science in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, in which to re-establish his prestigious auction galleries.

The beauty of the building with its two expansive floors of galleries echoes Al Schrager's professional dedication to 'recapturing the beautiful things' in our world. It provides the setting for fine estate auctions which are held regularly. Both buyers and sellers from national and local audiences appreciate his expertise, forthright service, and leadership in the field. He is known not only as the founder of Schrager Auction Galleries but also for his specialization in estate liquidations and appraisal services for insurance and probate purposes for over forty years.

The building, a significant Milwaukee landmark, is a magnificient neoclassic structure with elements of Art Deco. The Auditorium Gallery seats over nine hundred people and is topped with a fifty-nine foot leaded glass ceiling dome which is lit on auction evenings. The gallery is easily accessible from expressways and the airport, as well as any location in the city. For information regarding services, contact:

Swann Galleries, Inc.

Swann Galleries is the oldest and largest U.S. auctioneer specializing in Rare Books, Autographs and Manuscripts, Important 19th and 20th Century Photographs and Photographic Literature, Hebraica and Judaica, and Works of Art on Paper. We are known internationally, and we often set record prices.

We conduct some thirty five sales a year during the September–June auction season. At least two major sales are devoted to each of the above special fields. Other auctions include the following subjects: Americana; Art and Architecture; Early Printed Books; Decorative Graphics; Maps and Atlases; Medicine, Natural History, Science, and Technology; Modern Illustrated and Press Books; Modern Literature; Performing Arts and Magic; Sets and Bindings; Sporting Books; and Travel and Exploration.

In addition to these sales, for which detailed catalogues are prepared, we occasionally conduct 'shelf sales,' consisting of good material, principally from institutional or book trade consignors, that was deemed not appropriate for our regular auctions. This material is not catalogued, but shelf lists are available. You bid by shelf and are responsible for packing and removing your purchases.

Our quarterly newsletter, The Trumpet, available upon request, gives full information about forthcoming sales and contains a catalogue order form.
